REMOVED CANCEROUS GROWTH.

Dr. Reed Burns Performs Difficult Operation on Charles Wagner.

Charles Wagner, of Waymart, formerly a resident of Lincoln avenue, this city, and for many years a trusted employe of the Hendrick Manufacturing company, underwent a very difficult operation at the hands of Dr. Reed Burns, of Scranton, for the removal of a cancerous growth of the face at Dr. Wheeler's private hospital, Saturday morning.

Three square inches of diseased tissue were removed from the right side of the lower jaw and a portion of the bone was cut away. In order to cover the denuded surface the remaining tissue of the face had to be cut and rearranged. This was done by the use of a special instrument which reduced the orifice to one side and reduced the orifice somewhat in size. To correct this the surgeon slit it back a half inch on the left side and sewed the mucous membrane over the surface of the incision, forming an extension of the lips to the patient, will recover with a mouth of normal size and a pretty fair face.

Notwithstanding the fifty-nine years of Mr. Wagner, he stood the operation well and his many friends will be glad to learn that the probabilities are in favor of his discharge from the hospital in about three weeks.

NEW ZEALAND RAILROADS.

Traveling There Is Slow and Very Aggravating to an American.

From the Baltimore Sun.

New Zealand's steam railways are owned and operated by the government. Compared with American railways, they seem like toy railroads and the men "playing train." The locomotive is queer and small. The engine driver blows two loud blasts of the locomotive's whistle before starting, much like a steamer. A large hand bell at the stations is loudly rung prior to the shrieks of the locomotive's whistle. The guard (conductor) walks up and down the platform and says: "Take your seats—everybody take seats." instead of "all aboard" after which he blows a pocket whistle signal, like some United States trolley car conductors, and the train starts, but does not go much faster than a horse's slow pace, except down grade. The train stops in the bush, and you think the axle is broken or something is wrong, probably a "hold-up" which they call a "stuck-up," but no, the stop is merely to let the guard apply the brakes. Why do they want the brakes applied after stopping? Well, you see, there is ahead of us a slight down grade, not very much, but enough to require brakes; and the solitary guard could not apply all the brakes quick enough so they wait ten minutes for him to do so. It is almost like stopping an ox team in pioneer days. Air brakes are unknown, and the locomotive has no bell, but must always whistle.

The railway carriages have a plain, square, flat board seat against the sides of the coach lengthwise. Some have a leather cushion to sit upon. A few late coaches have six to eight narrow reversible seats. A solitary step, high up, made of one piece of board, aids the passenger to enter. The windows are small and near the roof. Baggage checking is unknown. You paste a label on your baggage, they gather it up and take it. But you must see that they put it off at your destination and must claim it in the general scramble before some one helps himself to it. Letters posted in a mail car must pay from 4 to 12 cents extra, according to their destination. No trains run at night or on Sunday. Live stock cannot travel on Monday or Friday. The cars for horses and cattle are called carts; other freight cars are termed wagons. They are built like packing cases, and have no opening except the missing roof, the door closing tightly. They are scarcely one-fourth the size of American cars.

There are no trolley cars in all of New Zealand, notwithstanding a population of 60,000 in Auckland and other towns almost as large. They are buses chiefly, and a few horse cars called "trams." On race days and other events the buses quit their regular routes and carry people from the center of the town to the races and events, leaving the residential section without service.

"That shows what you can do in this country," said the man with a loud voice as he rang up a ticket with a view to stopping the car. "John's one of the most remarkable self-made men we ever had in Wayne county."

"I should say so. Wonderful man! Why, that fellow came here twenty years ago with 60c, and last week he failed for a round half million. Beats the band what a ruster can do in this country," Detroit Free Press.

THE HARMLESS RATTLESNAKE.

It Does Not Always Strike When Given the Opportunity.

From the Atlantic Monthly.

I have seen a good many rattlesnakes—perhaps a hundred or more—in the Sierra Mountains, but I have never intentionally disturbed them, nor have they disturbed me to any great extent, even by accident, though they were oftentimes in danger of being stepped on. Once, while on my knees kindling a fire, one glided under the arch made by my arms.

The last time I sauntered through the big canon I saw about two snakes. One was not coiled, but neatly folded in a narrow space between two cobbles, stones on the side of the river, his head below the level of them, ready to shoot up like a Jack-in-the-box for frogs and birds. My foot spanned the space above within an inch or two of his head, but he only held it lower. In making my way through a particularly tedious tangle of buckthorn, I parted the branches on one side of an open spot and threw my bundle of bread in to it, and when, with my arms free, I was pushing through after it, I saw a small rattlesnake dragging its tail from beneath my bundle. When he caught sight of me he eyed me angrily, and with an air of righteous indignation seemed to be asking why I had thrown that stuff on him. He was so small I was inclined to slight him, but he struck out so angrily I drew back and approached the opening from the other side. But he had been listening, and when I looked through the brush I found him confronting me still with a come-in-if-you-dare expression. In vain I tried to explain that I only wanted my bread; he stoutly held the ground in front of it, and I was afraid that as he came nearer he might "close in" on me and strike before I could get away in such a tangle; so I just went back a dozen rods and kept still for half an hour, and when I returned found he had gone.
